Announcing the SYNERGY 2016 Pilot Awards
SYNERGY would like to congratulate our new 2016 Pilot Awardees. Aligning with SYNERGY's mission of fostering collaborative interactions between basic, translational, and health services researchers, the awardees come from diverse Dartmouth schools and departments. Two of the six awardees are co-funded with the Norris Cotton Cancer Center (NCCC). Read More at: https://synergy.dartmouth.edu/translational-pilot-grants.

SYNERGY's Biomedical Informatics Core
Amar Das, MD, PhD, leads the Division of Biomedical Informatics within Geisel's Department of Biomedical Data Science (https://bmds.dartmouth.edu), directs the Biomedical Informatics Core (https://synergy.dartmouth.edu/biomedical-informatics) at SYNERGY, and leads the Informatics Collaboratory for Design, Development and Dissemination (https://ic3d.dartmouth.edu). Dr. Das and his staff play a critical role within Dartmouth's research enterprise, helping researchers “to access and manage data that's being collected from different sources—everything from clinical trials to electronic health records” and to “build new tools or optimize the use of existing tools”, via the informatics collaborative and its staff of designers and software engineers.
